Far far away, past the Milky Way, lived Curious Cassie.

Curious Cassie lived on a planet called Greylon. There, you won't find flowers. You won't find grass. Just concrete and steel, as cold as glass.

But Curious Cassie didn't mind. She had treasure to find! She loved collecting objects she'd find on the ground, and would keep them in her little pouch.

A lost button. A metal shard. A shiny stone.

Some called them waste. Cassie called them wonderful.

One day, something sparkly caught her eye.

She reached out her hand and...

Oh no! Curious Cassie accidentally fell into a wormhole!

The wormhole turned and twisted in a thousand shimmering colours.

She swirled and spun and turned upside down!

Where am I?

Curious Cassie opened her eyes. The sky was bright blue. The sun was warm and golden. She found herself outside a train station with a lush tree-lined pathway.

UWU!UWU!

Curious Cassie looked up. Perched on a tree branch, was a little black bird. She's never been so close to nature before!

"That's the Asian Koel. It's saying hello to you!" A big voice bellowed from behind.

It's an elephant and his gentle rhino friend.

"It's a bird that's native to Singapore!" said the rhino.

"Oh, and welcome to Keppel station!"

Curious Cassie gasped. "Kep...pel? Singa...? No wait, I need to get home to Greylon!"

"Don't worry, little friend. We know just who can help!" said the elephant.

"Take the Circle Line train to Cantonment station and look for our friend, Ozzy Otter. He knows everything about journeys – near and far!"

Adventure Task 1

What are the names of the animal statues at Keppel station?

The elephant's name is: _____

The rhino's name is: _____

(Find the statues and fill in the blanks!)

"Thanks for your help," replied Curious Cassie. "What wonderful friends you are!"

Boarding the train so clean and bright, a magic vessel filled with pure delight. Her ears perked up at the cheerful chime,
“Next station, Cantonment!”

DING DONG!

Cantonment!

Stepping out from the train, Curious Cassie's eyes grew wide.

Above her, the ceiling curved into a grand arch. Towering colourful glass panels lined the platform, glowing softly in the light. Blues and greens and golds, all in a row. Back in Greylon, nothing ever looked like this.

And there beneath the lazy spin of a cool metal fan, sat a figure, tail thick and tan.

Adventure Task 2

Look up at the ceiling of Cantonment station. How many colourful glass panels are there? Count carefully!

There are _____ panels.

(Look up and count!)

She walked over slowly. “Excuse me, are you Ozzy Otter?”

The otter sprung to his feet: “I am! And you must be lost!”

“I need to go back to Greylon but I don’t know the way!” Curious Cassie exclaimed.

He leaned in, whiskers twitching. “Something awaits at Prince Edward Road station, shimmering and bright. It moves without legs, it glows without light.”

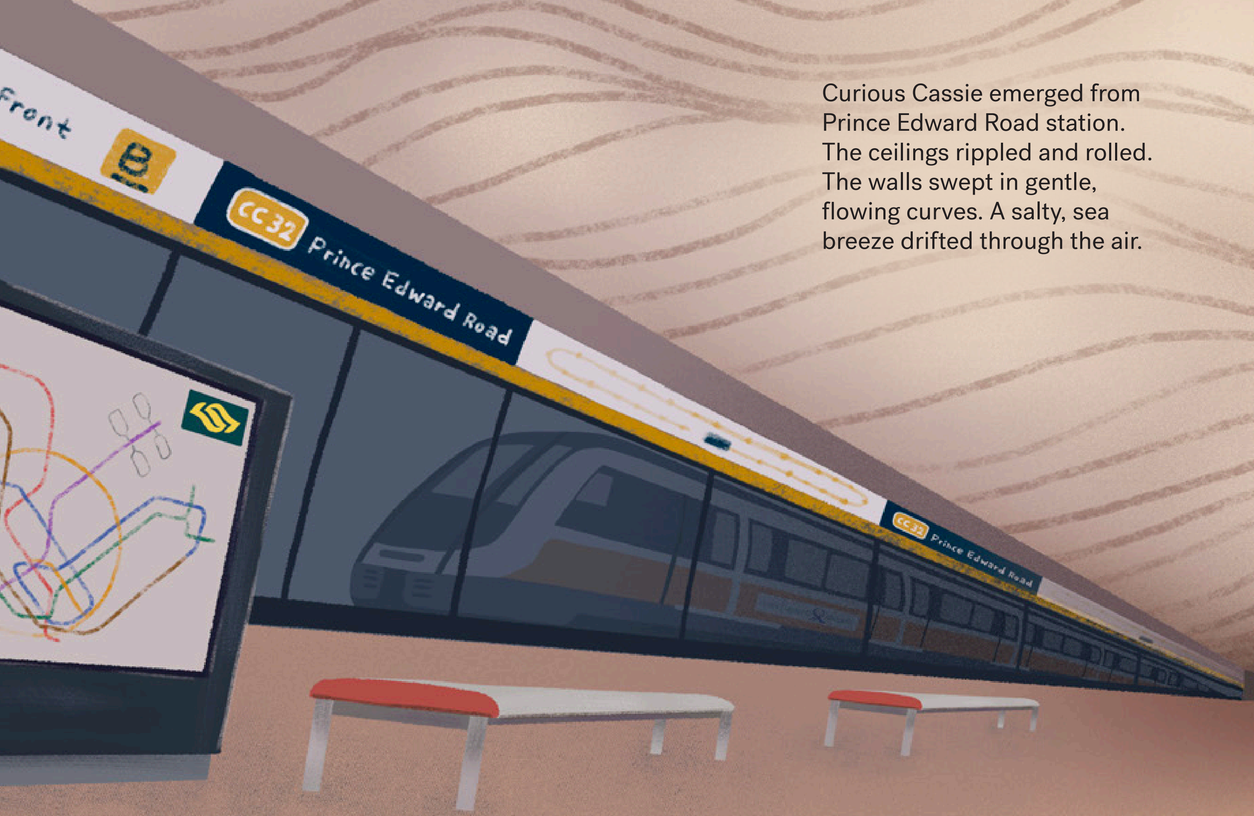
“Now, go! Before it slips out of sight!”

And before she knew it, Curious Cassie was on the move again.

Curious Cassie emerged from Prince Edward Road station. The ceilings rippled and rolled. The walls swept in gentle, flowing curves. A salty, sea breeze drifted through the air.

“Moves without legs? Glows without light? What could it be?” Curious Cassie scratched her head as she thought about what Ozzy Otter had said.

As she followed the waves deeper into the station, turning corners and surfing escalators, something sparkly caught her eye...



Adventure Task 3

What colour is the new Circle Line train livery?

Answer: _____

(Hint: It's the same colour as the Circle Line!)

A wall turned and twisted in a thousand shimmering colours! It swirled and spun and turned upside down!

“Hey, I know that shimmer!” she exclaimed. It’s the wormhole back to Greylon!

She reached out her hand toward the glittering wall and...

HEY CASSIE WAIT!

She stopped and turned around. It was Ozzy Otter, eyes wide and bright. Behind him, the elephant and the rhino stood in line.

“There’s one more thing you have to see before you go back,” he said in his gentle voice. “Come with us!”

Exiting the station hand in hand, Curious Cassie understood what they didn’t want her to miss.

Curious Cassie was greeted by the most beautiful sunset she had ever seen. With the sun melting into the horizon, the evening sky was drenched with hues of orange, pink and gold. She was too stunned to speak.

As they basked in the golden hour, Ozzy Otter pulled out a polaroid camera.

CLICK!
WHIRRRR!

Curious Cassie looked at the photograph. Smiling up at her new friends, she said to herself: “I think... this is my favourite thing I’ve ever found.”

With her heart feeling fuller than ever, she added the photograph to her little pouch of treasures.
