

Wavin' Colours in the Wind

DT19: Chinatown

Flying Colours

Chea Chai-Hiang

About the Artwork

The artist attempts to translate the mundane drying of clothes into one which is festive and celebratory. Created in a lenticular format, commuters will experience the subtle changes in colours, giving the illusion that the clothes are flying in the wind outside windows.

'Flying Colours' spans the concourse and leads commuters down to the platforms.

About the Artist

Chea Chai-Hiang is an artist, lecturer, writer and independent curator who has worked in Singapore, UK, Spain, Italy, Australia and China. Regarded as one of Singapore's pioneering contemporary artists, his works covers a wide range of disciplines, including printmaking, drawing, painting, sculpture, installation, performance and writing. Over four decades, a fundamental interest in his works is the relationship between language and meaning; text, in both Chinese and English, has been a recurrent motif in his art.
